CLAIMS

I claim:

1. A toy barrier structure comprising:

a longitudinally extending container having a base, a pair of side walls, a pair of end walls, and a top portion, said container being substantially hollow and comprising a semi-rigid plastic material whereby said container is self-supporting and has a predetermined shape;

filling means for filling said substantially hollow container with a liquid, whereby said filling of said container with said liquid would substantially increase weight without changing predetermined shape;

each of said end walls shall have apertures adapted to provide fluid connectivity between said longitudinally extended container and a second longitudinally extended container placed in juxtaposition with said longitudinally extended container.

2. The toy barrier structure in claim 1 wherein said semi-rigid plastic is selected from any polymer plastic material.
3. That which is described in claims 1, and 2 is for use as a toy to provide entertainment to children, with such application only limited by the imaginative mind.
